“New Boots ”

by Katherine Lynas

From Soles the shoe shop I collected,
Boots I lovingly selected.

I carefully unwrapped their box,
And pulled them over stripy socks.

They would not walk upon the floor,
But started climbing up the door.

Then headed off across the ceiling,
Giving me a sickly feeling.

Suddenly they jumped down hard,
And sprinted off into the yard.

Then out the gate and down the track,
I don't think I am coming back.

Handwrite the following poem on a A3 sheet (portrait orientation) and include illustrations.

Work Boots: Still Life

By Jim Daniels

Next to the screen door work boots dry in the sun.
Salt lines map the leather and laces droop
like the arms of a new-hire waiting to punch out.
The shoe hangs open like the sigh of someone too tired to speak
a mouth that can almost breathe.
A tear in the leather reveals a shiny steel toe
a glimpse of the promise of safety
the promise of steel and the years to come.
